An Unanswerable Argument.

The strongest argument which can be urged against the advisability of administering such corrosive and nerve-destroying poisons as arsenicand quinine for intermittent and remittent fevers, is the vastly superior success in the prevention and the vasily superior success in the prevention and cure of such diseases of a medicine which is the very antipode of the above named drugs, both in respect of its composition and the results wrought by it. Such a medicine is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a purely vegetable preparation, which not only cradicates with wonderful promptitude every trace of fever and ague, and kindred types of malarious disease, from the system, but is a certain preventive of all maladies begotten of missmanianted air and water. These results mineral antifebrile remedies do not effect with certainty, and their continued use entails consequences highly their continued use entails consequences highly penicious to the system. The Bitters, on the con-trary, not only afford speedy selies, but establish health on a permanent basis.

Vincland, N. J.,

The following is an extract from a description of Vincland, published in the New York Tribune, by the well known Agriculturist, Solon Robinson.

All the farmets were of the "well to do" sort, and some of them, who have turned their attention to truits and market gardening, have grown rich. The soil is foun, varying from sandy to clayey, and surface gently undulating, intersected with small streshis and occarional wit meadows, in which deposits of pest or muck are stored, sufsmall streshes and occarional wit meadows, in which deposits of peat or muck are stored, sufficient to fertilize the whole upland surface, sfier it has been exhausted of its matural fertility.

It is certainly one of the most extensive tracts, in an almost level position, and suitable condition for pl saant farming, that we know of this side of the Western prairies. We found some of the object farm apparently just as profitably productive as when first cleared of forest fifty or a hundred years are.
